Preface by the President

His Excellency Mr Cyril Ramaphosa,
President of the Republic of South Africa

This Black Industrialists Conference takes place on the eve of the 20th anniversary of the implementation of the Broad-based Black Economic Empowerment Act (B-BBEE Act).

It is an opportunity to reflect on progress in advancing redress and equity in the South African economy and consider what we need to do together to expand the frontiers of economic transformation for the next decade and beyond.

Transformation within our South African economy is a matter that goes to the core of what we fought for in the struggle against apartheid. Since the dawn of our democracy, we have been on the journey to change and replace a system entrenched in inequality and unfairness. It is undeniable that we have made gains in transforming a skewed, racialised economy. This will be documented in the publications, videos and data released at this Conference and by different government departments.

And yet, there is more to be done. We need to consider the role of private sector procurement, new value chains, access to financing for emerging black business and how existing systems militate against emerging black business. We are taking steps to significantly improve the state of our ports, rail lines and roads. This is part of a broader focus on the far-reaching reforms we are taking in telecommunications, energy and water to improve the competitiveness of our economy and reduce the cost of doing business.

This conference will be discussing opportunities to access other markets on the continent through the African Continental Free Trade Area and trade arrangements between South Africa and the rest of the world. Our achievements through the Black Industrialists Programme and other initiatives must act as a springboard to achieving higher rates of economic growth, social transformation and common prosperity.

Through this conference we want to establish a practice of recognising and celebrating black excellence in the economy. As government, we want to pledge our support to the endeavours of black and women entrepreneurs. We also want to challenge South African business to play its part. Established business needs to understand that transformation is vital for sustained growth and that it is in everyone's interests that the substantial capabilities of the private sector are mobilised to support broad-based black economic empowerment. Working together, we can grow this economy, create jobs and ensure that no-one is left behind.

Transformation within our South African economy is a matter that goes to the core of what we fought for in the struggle against apartheid.

Black Industrialists Catalysing Economic Growth and Jobs

Minister's Foreword

Hon. Ebrahim Patel,
Minister of Trade, Industry and Competition

This year we celebrate 20 years since the implementation in April 2004 of legislation on broad-based black economic empowerment.

Transformation policy initially focused on securing black ownership in the economy through facilitating acquisition by individuals of generally minority stakes in existing enterprises, coupled with board membership and expansion of black managers in senior positions.

This approach has evolved over time, to incorporate 4 new elements: one, a greater focus on broad-based empowerment schemes; two, the launch of the black industrialists' programme; three, expansion of worker ownership of shares in companies; and four, the law reform to enable greater powers to the competition authorities to address economic structure and market concentration which serve as inhibitors to an inclusive economy. Taken together, these different elements lay the basis for a profound change in ownership patterns in the economy, with the potential to unleash greater entrepreneurship, social equity and stability.

The 2015 new Black Industrialists' Policy sought as its goal the nurturing and development of enterprises led by black South Africans with controlling interests in these firms. It started as a funding programme through

The success of our democracy will depend on the progress we make in broadening the base of economic opportunity. Recent successes include the black industrialist programme and the expansion of worker ownership of shares of firms in the economy. Each bring an important aspect to economic inclusion. Black industrialists have benefited from a range of public policies, including industrial funding, competition policies, trade measures, sector master plans and supplier development funds by the private sector. In turn, they have generated a significant amount of wealth for South Africa and sustain more than 100 000 jobs.

public institutions, with grants from the dtic and loans from the Industrial Development Corporation (IDC) and National Empowerment Fund (NEF). Over the next few years, it began to incorporate supplier-development mandates involving the private sector, inter alia through public interest conditions in mergers, provisions in sector charters and use of equity-equivalent investment measures by foreign-owned firms.

The mandate of the competition authorities was expanded in 2019 to consider market structure and its impact as an inhibitor of SMMEs and black industrial development.

The Competition Commission's 2021 study on concentration in the South African economy found that a small number of firms dominate most product markets, constraining the entry and growth of SMMEs, depriving the economy from the talent of entrepreneurs who could contribute to growth, job creation and innovation.

Historically, the dtic-group measured its performance on the black industrialist programme through the flow of money (grants, loans or equity) to individual businesses. Over the last 13 years the dtic family approved R100 bn funding (in current values). In 2023, the dtic shifted its performance indicators to the impact of its work measured by turnover and number of jobs sustained by black industrialists.

This booklet highlights a sample of over 180 black industrialists and black entrepreneurs across 25 sectors and their contribution to the economy.

Black industrialists and entrepreneurs today increasingly shape the country's economy, including:

- Feeding the nation through growing, harvesting and packing fruit, nuts and vegetables; producing cannabis for medical products; farming meat and chicken and operating abattoirs; harvesting and processing fish; producing animal feed and fertilizers; and manufacturing food (such as sauces, noodles, pies, baked goods and sweets)
- Mining the rich ores of South Africa and producing steel products for rail, energy transport and communication; carry out electrification, electricity maintenance work and wooden-pole replacement;

- Keeping the nation moving through producing rail components and refurbishing motor coaches and wagons for rail freight companies; manufacturing automotive components and car part spares used by major OEMs; running petrol service stations, truck stops and shops/restaurants at service stations; and supplying storage tankers and diesel to mining projects
- Supporting service delivery through manufacturing water meters and chemicals that remove toxic substances from rivers and oceans;
- Making products we use on a daily basis such as furniture, clothing and footwear, school uniforms, protective clothing we use for work, cosmetics and hair extensions. They produce from tents, marques, plastic chairs and tables, detergents (and the chemicals used to make them), refuse bags and kettles;
- Improving our health through manufacturing vitamins, operating pharmacies, providing clinic services such as testing blood pressure, immunizing children and giving pain injections; providing medical devices and implants; and distributing robotic sanitization systems that disinfect rooms and reduce the risk of infections; producing face masks, hand disinfectants, medical body suits and isolation gowns,
- Developing the green economy through making industrial components and batteries to use in houses, factories, shopping centres; and
- Entertaining us through producing films and television series that tell our story.

These represent a small part of their growing impact, which extends also to the ICT-sector, construction, tourism, finance and retail.

The active measures taken to promote black industrialists unleashed entrepreneurship, innovation and the creation of new businesses, whilst promoting a greater spread of ownership in the economy.

I would like to thank the staff of the dtic-group for their work in supporting Black Industrialists, and challenge them to improve the access and impact of this funding in the years to come.

Black Industrialist and Entrepreneur Profiles

Note on the use of 'black industrialist'

This booklet uses the terms 'black industrialist' and 'black entrepreneur'. They each have a specific meaning for funding entities of the dtic-group.

A 'black industrialist' refers to both matters relating to the control of a firm and the sector of the economy it operates in. The Black Industrialist Programme is directed at supporting the entry or growth of majority black-owned businesses in the productive sectors of the economy.

A common definition is therefore that it is majority black-owned. Sometimes the entity if black-controlled, will qualify. This distinguishes it from what is referred to as a 'black-empowered' company, which covers firms with a black South African shareholding above 25% but less than majority/controlling ownership.

The industrial sectors covered are manufacturing, mining, agriculture and a range of productive services (e.g., ICT and logistics).

It does not include financial services and retail.

However, each entity of the dtic-group has a specific mandate, and their funding will thus be confined to a smaller subset of the broad black industrialist definition.

The Black Industrialists Policy document adopted for the Department's funding by the then dti in 2015 defined black industrialist as entities operating in the manufacturing sectors of the economy in line with the industrialisation path as articulated in the Industrial Policy Action Plan as follows: • Blue/Ocean Economy, including Vessel Building and Repair • Oil and Gas • Clean Technology and Energy • Mineral Beneficiation • Aerospace, Rail and Automotive Components • Industrial Infrastructure • Information Communication Technologies • Agro-Processing • Clothing, Textiles/Leather And Footwear • Pulp, Paper and Furniture • Chemicals, Pharmaceutical and Plastics • Nuclear • Manufacturing-related logistics • Designated sectors for localisation".

the dtic (department) has added film-makers and global business services (such as call-centres) to its industrial funding suite.

The Industrial Development Corporation has a Black Industrialist Programme, covering manufacturing as well as mining, parts of agriculture, and certain productive services. However, the IDC mandate also covers firms that are not part of the Black Industrialist Programme, for example, manufacturing and other firms that do not meet the criteria of being majority black-owned.

The National Empowerment Fund (NEF) within its mandate also covers black industrialists. The NEF mandate covers a broad range of activities, going beyond the industrial sectors. Outside of the black industrial definition, it covers black entrepreneurs in retail, service stations, finance, security, etc.

A black entrepreneur is thus a wider definition and covers intermediation services such as banking and finance, as well as retail, wholesale and distribution.

Highlights: Ten Featured Black Industrialists or Entrepreneurs

Amka Products

A South African home-grown company in the Health and Beauty Industry with over 4000 employees, Amka comprises four manufacturing plants and 400 products sold in 35 African countries.

Amka does not only manufacture cosmetics, personal care and household cleaning products but has since the COVID-19 pandemic branched off into manufacturing hand sanitisers, antiseptic and hygiene products mainly for the local market.

From the onset, Amka was focused on the unique needs and opportunities inherent to Africa's emerging markets. Today it is a major manufacturing and marketing enterprise with specialised expertise. With a portfolio of over 50 popular brands, Amka is one of the leading local manufacturers in skin care, bath care, hair care, home care, perfumes, deodorants and sunscreens.

Their brands include some of South Africa's most-loved such as Clere, Satiskin, Mousson, Revlon, Eversun, Tropitone, Cuticura, Lip Ice and Schick.

Majesty Oil Mills is one of the beneficiaries funded for machinery and building improvements. The company is a manufacturer of soya oil, soya mince products as well as soya cakes for animal feed based in the West Rand District Municipality. The plant also processes sunflower seeds to produce cooking oil.

The funding support contributed towards the following:

- Expansion of the manufacturing facility which currently processes more than 600 tons of soya seeds per day, from 300 tons prior to funding.
- Investment in new machinery that increased the crush volume and subsequently decreased the cost of production.
- Reduction in the quantity of imported soya cake and soya bean oil.
- Procurement of 70% raw materials/inputs from the domestic economy.
- Creation of over 20 new jobs and sustaining over 229 existing jobs.

In the last 5 years, we have supported around 1,000 black industrialists with funding and other forms of support. These black-owned firms employ more than 90,000 workers and contribute many billions of rands to our economy. At the same time, about 200,000 more workers obtained ownership of shares in the companies they work, bringing the total worker ownership in companies in the South African economy to well over half a million workers. We see this trend continuing to grow as more and more companies realise that it is beneficial to their operation that their workers should have a stake in the businesses they work for. The reforms that we have initiated and the work that is underway will enable us to end load shedding, to improve our logistics system, to achieve water security and ultimately to create jobs. While our challenges have never been greater, our response to these challenges will lead us to greater prosperity than we have ever known.

Baty Automotive Components Supply

Baty Automotive Component Supply (BACS) is a tier 3 components supplier to Ford through its partnership with Motherson Sumi System. BACS is involved in the manufacturing and assembly of automotive components, including the production of plastic injection-moulded sub-components, pressed steel sub-components and nuts and bolts.

For the past five years, it has operated under the Automotive Industry Development Centre incubation programme, a government-led initiative promoting automotive industrial manufacturing by building automotive industrial parks and incubation parks to service original equipment manufacturers (OEMs). Through this initiative and partnership with Motherson, BACS has graduated from the programme and now contracts directly with local automotive manufacturers.

Funding received from government will enable the company to expand its production plant, procuring and installing the seven spray booth ovens critical to its growth objectives. This funding aligns with the automotive masterplan, which promotes localisation while deepening the participation of black-owned companies in the automotive value chain.

Over the next five years, as this black industrialist moves closer to becoming a major components supplier to global automotive manufacturers such as Ford, 78 new jobs will be created.

Mokoka Shabangu Farming and Poultry

MokokaShabangu Farming and Poultry (Pty) Ltd is a start-up broiler contract growing entity and a black female-owned business which was incorporated in 2019.

This company received funding approval for the establishment of 10 new broiler houses for 450 000 birds per cycle. This expansion increases the number of slaughter birds (and indirectly contribution to meat production) coming from black poultry producers in the industry. It also helps to ensure that local production makes up a higher component of consumption in the future. Poultry provides the most affordable source of animal protein to the South African consumer, which makes it critical to food security.

This investment is aligned with government's Poultry Master Plan and strategy to support the scale-up and commercialization of black contract broiler farmers. This also supports inclusive development and allowing black female industrialists to further entrench themselves in the sector.

Having a job does not only provide an income – it is fundamental to people’s sense of self-worth, dignity, hope, purpose and inclusion. From the depths of deprivation and inequality, we have worked over 30 years to ensure that all South Africans have an equal chance to prosper. It is not enough to recognise the injustices of the past; we need to correct them. We have introduced laws and undertaken programmes to enable black South Africans and women to advance in the workplace, to become owners and managers, to acquire land and build up assets. The proportion of jobs in executive management held by black people increased almost five-fold between 1996 and 2016.

Wurthmore Concrete (Pty) Ltd

Wurthmore Concrete (Pty) Ltd ("Wurthmore") is a black owned business established in 2021 operating as a manufacturer of concrete in the construction industry.

The business is owned by Mr. Sheridan Rivombo who identified a gap in the market and established a company to satisfy the demand of concrete to construction companies in the Frances Baard district, Kimberly and surrounding areas within a radius of 150 kms Wurthmore Concrete owned one (1) concrete plant which is 25m³ in size. The plant has been in existence for over 20 years and has experienced regular breakdowns during operations. This has seen Wurthmore Concrete not being able to service the demand of concrete to its growing clientele as the only supplier of concrete in Kimberly and surrounding areas.

Further to this, the business has limited capacity of mixer trucks to move the concrete to the clients. This poses a need to increase their current fleet of trucks. This is because the demand for concrete had grown significantly since the closure of OMV and VectoCrete (the competition) in 2021 and Wurthmore became the only ready-mix concrete supplier in Kimberly.

The Prawnerly Bistro & Bar

The Prawnerly (Pty) Ltd t/a The Prawnerly Bistro & Bar is a black and women owned restaurant. The Prawnerly is owned by Brand Contact Consultant (Pty) Ltd and Ms. Shaniel Mjekevu and Ms. Cheslyn Thethe.

The restaurant was established in 2019 just before the harsh lockdowns with restricted trade. The Prawnerly operated successfully from 2019 until 2022 and had to close doors because of the building being sold and that was a consequence of COVID. The Centre (Illovo Junction) was struggling with a decrease in foot traffic due to many of tenants moving out without new tenants moving in. Crime in the area had also escalated.

The entrepreneur managed to keep the brand a success through relationships established in the industry. The restaurant continued to be operational offering catering services for events catering exclusively for sea food, truck vendor, and meal planning. The entrepreneurs found a new and more compelling location which is better suited to the growth requirements for The Prawnerly along the prominent Keyes Avenue in Rosebank, Johannesburg and required funding to set up the restaurant in a new location.

This expansion not only symbolizes Mohlalefi's commitment to excellence but also serves as a testament to the collaborative efforts of various stakeholders in fostering industrial development and creating a sustainable economic future.

Tshellaine Holdings

Transaction Background

Tshellaine Holdings was founded by its two Directors; Mr. Tshepo Ashley Lekgau and Ms. Elaine Khutsiso Phasha and it provides off-campus student accommodation currently accredited with the University of Johannesburg (UJ).

Tshellaine was approved funding for construction of Winchester Hills situated at 25 Marula Crescent, South of Johannesburg. The building has 66 units that can accommodate 264 students.

Business Developments, Challenges, and Interventions

Tshellaine Holdings started operating from its newly built residence, Winchester Hills during the 2022 academic year, this is when the entrepreneurs started experiencing building defects mainly associated with the water pumps, heat pumps and geysers wherein multiple pipe bursts were experienced.

The NEF immediately intervened through its Post and TWR divisions to have the building defects attended to. Major work that involved fixing the leaks, cracks and repainting the walls was done by the contractors in December 2023. The NEF's Independent Project Manager (PM) has been tasked to conduct a follow up assessment to check that there are no major outstanding issues.

Job Creation Award

Tshellaine began operating in 2022, in the middle of Covid, when a number of universities nationally still had online classes. This meant that students could study from anywhere, affecting occupancy rates for properties in major city centres. During 2022 and 2023 academic years, Tshellaine Holdings reported average occupancy rates of 58% and 46,5% respectively. Aforementioned plumbing issues had also affected occupancy. There has since been an improvement in the occupancy rate. The current occupancy rate for the 2024 academic year is 64%. 170 out of 264 units are occupied. Tshellaine has a list of 103 students waiting to take up the remaining units as soon as they get NSFAS approval.

The NEF remains involved and committed to getting Tshellaine to profitability and self-sufficiency. 2024 looks promising.

Tshellaine Holdings continues to contribute to the employment creation in South Africa. The business currently employs a total of 11 employees (5 Male and 6 Female), all BBBEE.

Khabokedi Waste Management

Thank you for the invite to the second edition of the Black Industrialists and Exporters Conference and Awards.

We also take this opportunity to thank the Department of Trade and Industry in organising these awards and the conference.

We extend our appreciation for the NEF for nominating us for the inaugural awards which culminated in our winning of the two nominations.

The winning of the award elevated our company from public obscurity to an identifiable waste management brand.

The most valuable benefit from this award is that it:

- Made it easy for us to access markets.
- Changed the attitude of some of our customers.
- Boosted the moral of our staff.

Job Creation Award

We however would like these not to be just awards.

We raised the adoption of a "winner circle" system where the department can hear from the winners on:

- Their challenges
- The need for the department assistance in unlocking obstacles especially with certain markets (i.e. mining in our case)

BT Industrialist Group

Local Manufacturer Award

The BT Industrial Group stands at the forefront of Africa's industrial revolution, driven by a commitment to innovation, sustainability, and excellence in High-Density Polyethylene (HDPE) Pipe Manufacturing, Engineering Consulting, Risk Management, and Medical Device Development. The honor served as a clear endorsement of our steadfast commitment to the continent's development and prosperity. Rooted deeply in African soil, our company's dedication transcends mere commercial interests. It is a commitment to employ technology and innovation in addressing the unique challenges our societies face.

Our business is responding to the demands of the global energy transition and a projected 500 billion cubic meters increase in Africa's water requirement for mining, agriculture, urban and industrial development over the next 30 years, amidst the complexities of existing infrastructure which often fails, leading to unmet return on investment targets. Furthermore, with Africa's burgeoning population, there's an urgent need for indigenous solutions to contemporary healthcare challenges. Therefore, we are at the forefront of designing and manufacturing innovative medical devices aimed at enhancing clinical outcomes while reducing healthcare costs.

Receiving this recognition from the highest echelon of governance reaffirmed our confidence in the power of African innovation and the critical role of bespoke, locally developed solutions in promoting a sustainable and self-reliant future for Africa thriving on her own terms. Moreover, the award brought to light our vital contributions across key sectors such as water management infrastructure in mining, construction, agriculture, and healthcare. Our accomplishments, including the laying of nearly 1 million kilometers of pipelines across Africa, which has enabled increased mineral processing capacity, the provision of clean water, and the irrigation of crops and various patents and trademarks in healthcare, are testament to our technical prowess and our ability to meet the current and future engineering and manufacturing needs, culminating in a flourishing Africa.

Following our award recognition, our enterprise has seen tremendous growth across Africa, marking a significant leap in tackling the continent's infrastructure and healthcare needs. The honor reflects our innovative spirit and the visible impact of our work, from completing over 100 projects and installing nearly 1 million kilometers of pipelines to leading in green energy and healthcare technologies. Our leadership in sustainable development and improving livelihoods is unwavering.

Our growth is partly due to strategic investments in the copper belt across Zambia, the DRC, and other African nations, enhancing our manufacturing and export capabilities in line with the global energy shift. This expansion includes establishing a presence in Lusaka and plans for a new office in Lubumbashi.

We're not just at the forefront of green innovation; we are leading the charge. We're finalizing certification for manufacturing a green hydrogen pipeline and introducing modular water treatment plants to combat water scarcity efficiently. Our commitment to sustainability is not just a goal; it's a core value.

Our patented pre-filled syringes were launched in March 2023 and have been widely accepted in the market. This demonstrates our ability to reduce healthcare costs and improve clinical outcomes significantly. We have expanded our medical team, including wound closure specialists, to showcase further our commitment to providing effective products and solutions for a growing African population needing new approaches to healthcare. Our products have transformed countless lives by offering significantly less expensive wound closure options than alternative approaches.

The accolade we received has encouraged us to pursue innovation and venture into new frontiers confidently, reinforcing customer trust in our solutions. This award recognized our past achievements and motivated us to continue our contributions towards a thriving, self-sufficient Africa.

Cape Bio Technologies

Winning the Black Industrialist and Exporter Award in the category of Innovation and Technology came at a time when the world had just gone through the most disruptive pandemic of our times. Our business was relatively small and had developed an innovation that assisted our country and the SADC region to manage the pandemic through PCR testing, before vaccine roll-out. The recognition confirmed that we are a health tech company with enormous potential, and this propelled us to swiftly develop other critical technologies that will have meaningful contributions to the quality of healthcare in South Africa and the continent.

Since then, we acquired strategic partners that became instrumental in our ability to grow as a core biotech firm. These include one local pharmaceutical company, and strategic partners in Greece, Italy, France, China, and The United Kingdom. These are where we are opening new markets and undertaking technology diffusion and absorption.

Best Innovator Award

We also have been recognized locally and internationally as the fastest-growing biotech firm in Africa.

With awards for our artificial intelligence innovation and being Africa's top innovation company in 2023 through various awards and recognitions. We are also poised to be a significant role player in South Africa's rollout of National Health Insurance (NHI), through our locally manufactured medical devices, clinical diagnostic reagents, artificial intelligence tools and production of therapeutic enzymes to curb rare diseases prone to African populations, amongst other health technologies.

Lindiwe Sanitary Pads

Please tell us, in your own words, what the win meant for you, your business and the impact of the award.

The win gave our business a national exposure we never thought we would have. It also validated us as a business and boosted my confidence as a founder and owner of Lindiwe Sanitary Pads. It has also opened a lot of investments opportunities and access to markets. No doubt the win has elevated our business to greater heights.

Woman Industrialist Award

You can also tell us of developments and notable highlights in your business since the last awards.

We have secured funding to establish AFRICA's 1st women owned large scale sanitary pads manufacturing plant. The funding has enabled us to be based in a brand-new factory that was built from scratch for us along the N14 Highway in Centurion, Pretoria. We have also bought a sanitary pads manufacturing machine with a capacity to produce at least 800 sanitary pads per minute. This makes us one of the two companies in South Africa with a machine with a capacity of this magnitude. I am excited about the expansion and being a trailblazer in our industry.

PELE Green Energy

Sustainability Award

Please tell us, in your own words, what the win meant for you, your business and the impact of the award.

Being the inaugural winner of the Sustainability Award has been instrumental in raising the profile of Pele Green Energy and further advancing the work that we do. It has increased the profile and visibility of our brand within the energy and African business landscape culminating in us accompanying the South African President on a trade delegation visit to Saudi Arabia and Qatar.

It has further validated our position as one of the leading South African Independent Power Producers with the largest portfolio of operating power plants.

Pele Green Energy is in its 15th year of operation, and we are mindful that our role is to serve the people of South Africa through the provision of renewable energy, this award serves as a reminder that our work is seen, felt, and appreciated. It is the highest honour for any founder and leader of an organisation to receive an award from the President of one's country. It tells us that the sacrifices we have made over the 15 years, the challenges and obstacles faced and endured have all been part of a deliberate plan to mould us into an organisation that will survive the test of time and work alongside the state in changing the lives of the communities in which our power plants operate in.

You can also tell us of developments and notable highlights in your business since the last awards.

Since the awards in 2022, Pele Green Energy has:

Ms Gloria Serobe

It was an absolute honour to be awarded The Black Industrialist Pioneer award in 2022. In reflecting over the past two years what the reward meant for myself and WIPHOLD, a number of thoughts came to mind.

The award is foremost really a testament of what the enabling environment created by government when it introduced BBBEE can achieve when done properly and with the spirit in which it was meant to be. I hope that the recognition of using this window of opportunity to build a successful business and WIPHOLD's journey can be an inspiration to others.

WIPHOLD also believes that success for industrialists is measured around the creation of an institution which has been set up to outlast the founders and thus creating a legacy that lives on beyond the founders. The award also recognizes the creation of WIPHOLD as such an institution and the impact that WIPHOLD has had on the business landscape and the social transformation of South Africa.

Black Industrialist Pioneer Award

Following the award, there was more awareness of WIPHOLD and my own journey amongst the younger generation which inspired them to understand that hard work, tenacity and a long-term focus pays off and that nothing everlasting is achieved overnight. I received this award after co-founding WIPHOLD 29 years ago.

There have also been more requests to share the WIPHOLD story and the secret to its success both, locally and internationally. The award also contributed in reviving the awareness again of the WIPHOLD story, especially in a post-COVID world.

Astrofica Technologies

Astrofica Technologies was a co-winner of the Woman Industrialist category at the inaugural Black Industrialists and Exporters Conference held in 2022.

Astrofica a black women company dealing with high-technology solutions and is a service provider with a keen interest in owning and commercializing actionable information and business intelligence derived from our spaceborne assets. Their core skills reside in the integration, qualification and acceptance testing of satellite systems on the upstream, and enhanced client-specific application development on the downstream.

Astrofica is owned by Jessie Ndaba and Khalid Manjoo. These ladies shared their story on winning this award, its meaning and impact. They believe being in the space it is sometimes difficult to market as most of the projects we are involved in, are highly confidential.

Astrofica has found that the award received at the Black Industrialist Conference of 2022 has contributed immensely in their business development. Jessie and Khalid says they now have interest from other operators to collaborate with them in building a constellation of Satellites. Astronica has hope that in the next year (2025), they will be in a better position to share more information.

Woman Industrialist Award Winner

Following receipt of the Black Industrialist award, Astrofica received a contract to work together with the Cape Peninsula University of Technology to Assemble, Integrate and Test their two satellites that will be used for maritime domain awareness. The project is very important for the country as it would assist in monitoring illegal activities on our seas.

Astrofica is doing spectrum monitoring for an international regulator as well, which is a big deal as they have always wanted a foot in the door in other sectors outside space, using space-based technology and the skill acquired during Space Programs.

This women owned business also has two big international Space projects that are in the pipeline, and one local project. Hopefully in 2025, they will be able to share more about them too.

Two weeks ago, Mr President when you cut the ribbon symbolically releasing the first cargo onto the ship and banged the ingungu drum at the ceremony in Durban port, it signaled the start of preferential African trade, fulfilling the 2019 SONA commitment.

And it is important. For centuries before colonialism, Africans developed trade routes facilitating the flow of goods amongst Africans - gold and salt, beads and carvings, ivory and gum, metal works and textiles.

From ancient centres of learning like Alexandria and Timbuktu, to the northern civilisations in Egypt and Carthage, the western Kingdoms of Ghana, Mali, and Songhai; the trans-Saharan trade routes, the eastern trading centres of Zanzibar, Mombasa and Mogadishu, to the ancient southern civilisations of Great Zimbabwe and Mapungubwe, Africans traded with neighbours and with the world.

Colonialism broke those ties, undermining Africa's industry and trade. The harm to our societies has lasted for centuries. Reducing Africans to exporters of raw materials and importers of consumer goods. This left us poor, left us vulnerable and left us dependent.

With the African free trade area, we're pivoting away from that model, to trade as neighbours with manufactured and digital products, services and food.

To break the bonds of neo-colonialism. And to reconnect with our own history.

Remarks during Sona Debate 2024, by Ebrahim Patel, Minister of Trade, Industry and Competition, City Hall, 14 February 2024.
